

MEDIA RELEASE

For immediate release - Friday 11 March 2016

KEY WORDS: art, science, public forum, environment, water

The Waterwheel team is proud to announce and invite you to partake in our exciting final large online event: WATER WORKS!

Friday 18 March to Sunday 20 March

NOTE: date & time vary according to your timezone!

Programme: <http://bit.ly/program-WaterWorks>

250+ entries, 150+ scientists, artists, activists and youth from 5 continents contributed to the call for the online exhibition: WATER WORKS!

They responded to the questions:

- how WATER WORKS despite climate change, financial crises, war, and global environmental damage
- how art, science, design, and activism can reinstate the social, cultural and environmental value of water
- how we can give recognition to the indispensable and invaluable ways that water works

A fantastic group of 22 curators from 19 countries will discuss selected entries and respond to online audience, in a streaming event on the Waterwheel video-collaboration system, the Tap.

This event can be described as

- a live forum between audience, curators & contributors, interspersed with short performances and videos
- a celebratory event of World Water Day and the closing of the internet platform Waterwheel, after 5 years of successful activities and the building up of a dynamic global community

Special guest, world-famous classical Indian singer Mahesh Vinayakram will sing for the opening and closing of the event.

An additional special workshop DIY Audio Streaming will be held on Waterwheel by SoundCamp streaming technician Grant Smith, on Sunday 20 March 9-11 am (UK time).

Audience is invited to watch and interact from their own computers anywhere in the world, free of charge!

DAYS: 18-20 March 2016
